Message from the President: We Don't Need More Churches

Nathan Cline, LCN President, presents LCN's newly launched church-planting initiative. He explains the reasoning and strategy behind our approach for the upcoming year. We are excited to see how God uses our Local Centers and member churches throughout the country to build up healthy, disciple-making churches.

Since 1981, LCN has helped plant over 5,000 churches. The church I have the opportunity to pastor was one of those, and before we launched I was consistently asked the same question— Why plant? The U.S. doesn't need another church.

The reality is, they were right. We don't need more churches in this country. What we really need is more healthy churches.

The desire for healthy churches led LCN to focus on equipping pastors and churches to be disciple-makers, resulting in an increase in church health, revitalizations, and a network of hundreds of churches gathering every month in Local Centers unified around the Great Commission.

Bring Pastors Together to Better Reach Your Community

Bobby Stepp, LCN Local Center Leader in Front Royal, Virginia, shares how the pastors in his community have connected through their LCN Local Center. Through the relationships built with fellow pastors in the area, these leaders organized a community prayer event where over ten churches gathered to pray for the needs of their community. Step across denominational lines to work together towards the common goal of making disciples. God does great things when he pulls his people together.

If you would like to join or start a Local Center in our area, you can find more information here.

Making Disciples Through Foster Care Ministry

Lou Giampaglia of King's Chapel in Glenmont, New York, shares how churches in his community minister to foster families. As children are placed into foster care, families are often faced with unexpected needs for furniture, clothing, and even food. Lou shares how churches in his area have stepped up to meet these needs. What an opportunity to meet the physical and present needs of these families that can lead to meaningful Gospel conversation.
